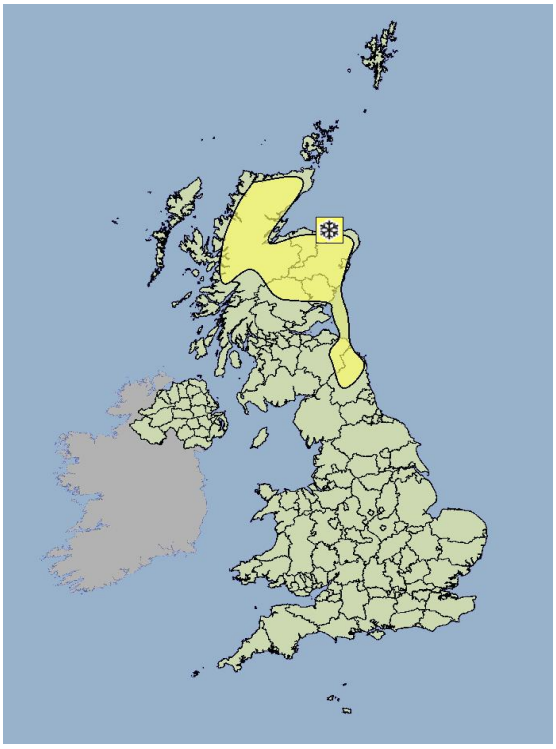
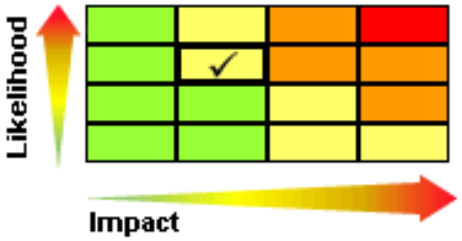
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Wintry showers will occur at times through Monday night and Tuesday, although impacts on the road network from lying snow are mostly likely to occur overnight and at first on Tuesday morning, particularly routes across the Grampians and northern Highlands.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow

Valid from 22:00 on Mon, 24th Apr 2017 until 09:00 on Tue, 25th Apr 2017

Hail, sleet and snow showers are expected to become frequent overnight and at first on Tuesday morning. Heavier snowfall is likely to affect higher level routes where 2-5 cm of snow may accumulate in places, whilst 1 to 2 cm is possible to lower levels. Some transport routes may be affected, with journeys requiring longer travel times.
